

ABSTRACT

Serving data units on a network includes queuing data units from a first application in a first buffer, queuing data units from a second application in a second buffer, moving data units from the second buffer to the first buffer following a predetermined delay, and 5 serving data units from the first buffer.